Vue Weekly is available free of charge at well over 1,000 locations throughout Metro Edmonton, and is funded and published solely through the support of our advertisers. Vue Weekly is a division of 662812 Alberta Ltd. and is published every Thursday.

We strive to ensure that our comprehensive listings are correct. However, in this uncertain world, events beyond anyone's control can torpedo even the best laid plans. So call ahead. It can't hurt. Artists are chatty people by nature, anyway. Letters/artwork/submissions are always welcome by fax, mail, email, or (horror!) hand delivered. If physically assaulted in or around 24 Sussex Drive, call the Jean Chretien Personal Protection Taskforce for immediate satisfaction.

Spoils of a divided country

BY JONATHAN MURPHY

The federal Liberals are in a fine old mess.

They should be basking in glory. After all, they're above 50 per cent in the polls, with only a ragtag and ineffective parliamentary opposition.

But people are already squabbling over the spoils of a divided country, the Chretien honeymoon is over and the government's economic policies could have been written by Presto himself.

It's past time for an injection of passion, preferably something a little more substantial than the Shawnigan Strangler's WWF chokehold on a rent-a-mob protester. While the mandarins in the ministry of Finance won't let him squirm out of the neo-conservative economic agenda, there's still plenty of room for low-cost flag-waving. The recent federal cabinet shuffle is a sign that's exactly what the wily Chretien has in mind.

Impossible task

Winnipeg's veteran political baron, Lloyd Axworthy, was rewarded with the foreign affairs portfolio. He had struggled for two years with the impossible task of reforming the Canadian social safety net while the finance ministry fanatics were gutting it of resources.

After watching Axworthy swing in the wind because of the prime minister's unwillingness to stand up to the neo-con hurricane, giving him the coveted portfolio was the least Chretien could do.

Axworthy remains very much a social liberal, and the perfect candidate to reassert Canada's humanitarian international tradition. His predecessor, tired Quebec warhorse Andre Ouellet, was never able to shake off the vestiges of the Mulroney era's humiliating pro-American sycophancy.

The new minister has already taken steps against Third World child labor and nuclear proliferation, but a bigger test will be forging alliances with Mexico and other American states to balance the U.S. juggernaut.

If Axworthy landed the plum, Sheila Copps was given the hot seat. As Heritage Minister, she's the country's new cultural supremo, at a time when many despair over Canada's future.

But if anyone can succeed, she will. She's tough, ambitious and a genuine believer.

Copps is already knee-deep in alligators. The Americans are talking tough again on cultural free trade (a.k.a. the right to force-feed syndicated sitcoms down our throats 24 hours a day), while the Juneau report on the CBC came up with the novel and highly unpopular idea of raising taxes to keep the listing MotherCorp afloat.

Three weeks ago, Industry Canada nixed the creation of a Canadian arm of American bookstore giant Borders, Inc.

Though the decision went almost unnoticed outside business pages and the bookselling industry, it was the first time this Liberal government has decisively resisted the endless encroachment of American culture.

An American-dominated chain would have made the already difficult life of Canadian writers almost impossible.

Just as Canadian movies rarely break into the American-controlled distribution system, and are therefore relegated to boutique status even in their own country, so Canadian writers (and readers) would have been subject to the bulk-buying whims of Borders HQ in Michigan.

Juneau report

Better-known and equally controversial, the Juneau report on the CBC wisely confirmed the value of the public broadcaster. In particular, its radio network is a real cornerstone of Canadian identity.

Although the plethora of private country music and bubblegum rock stations might pull more listeners, CBC radio is our only outlet for intelligent discussion of culture and politics.

Juneau's endorsement of further Canadianization of CBC television is also timely.

The network has long been suffering from an identity crisis. While CBC is never allowed to compete head-on with the private broadcasters for the mind-numbing American drivel we seem to prefer, it is also starved of the resources needed to develop strong Canadian programming.

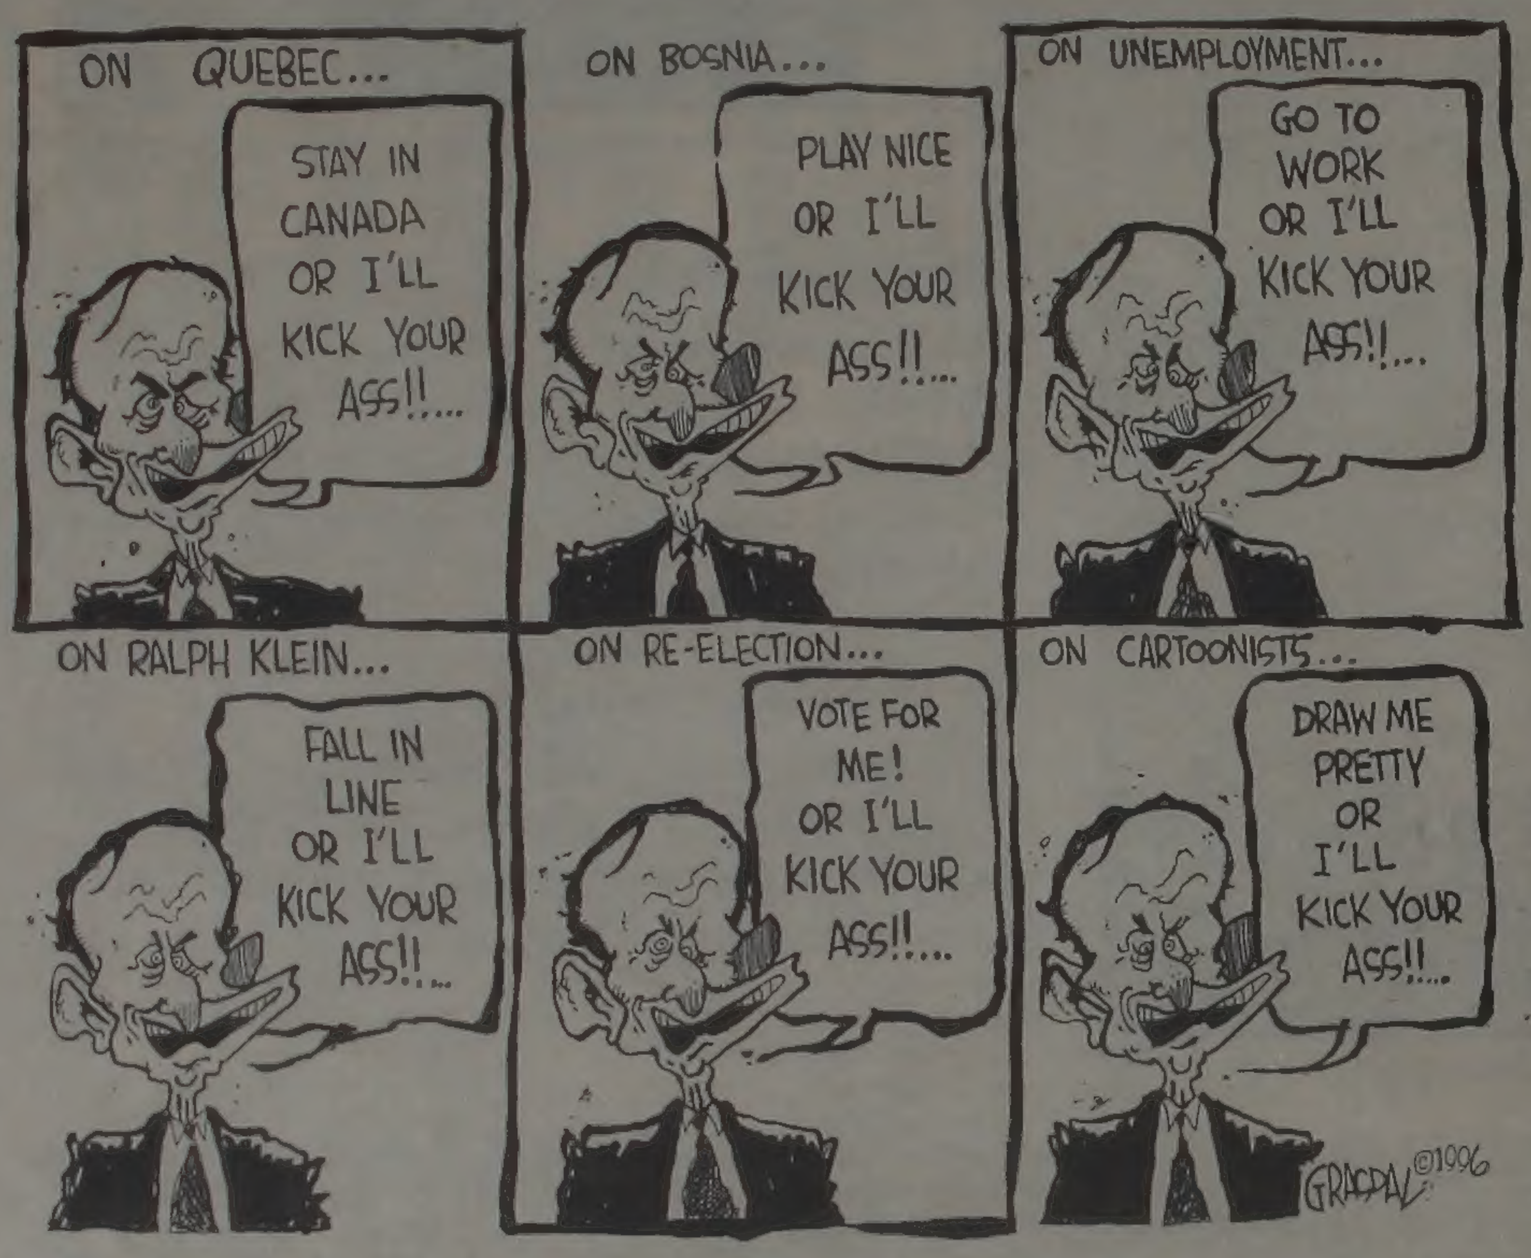
Right-wing columnists are trying to manufacture a public furor over proposed modest tax increases which would allow CBC television some security.

The fact is, most Canadians already pay significant taxes through their cable bills for both CBC News world and private stations like TSN. A couple of extra dollars each month to pay for the basic CBC service pales in comparison with the endless array of user fees both federal and provincial governments impose on us each year.

The next few months will be a test not just for Sheila Copps, but also for her boss.

Chretien must support her as she stands up to the American trade bullies and the private broadcasters' lobby.

If he doesn't, we can look forward to eternal nights curled up on the couch with the latest Judith Krantz novel, while our partner surfs the 500-channel TV universe in search of those wonderful Bill Cosby reruns.



Keep health care intact

BY PAM BARRETT

In the last five weeks, Edmonton's remaining two full-service hospitals have had to postpone at least 68 surgeries. Last week, a young man had to wait 17 hours before his broken leg was mended.

Welcome to your new and improved health care system in Alberta.

One which boasts hundreds of millions less in cost, and about the same reduction in service—or medical help, as it should be called.

In other words, don't count on it. To heck with you if you are in pain—go pray at the altar of the accumulated debt (not deficit—because we don't have one). Your chances at pain relief are about the same.

I listened to our esteemed premier last week, after the Throne Speech was read. He told (at least) radio reporters that our health care system needed streamlining because our acute care beds were filled with long-term care patients.

True enough. In fact, this has been the case for nearly two decades.

The problem should have been addressed at least a dozen years ago. But it wasn't. See, there is relatively little political glamor to be had in building long-term care facilities as compared to constructing exotic buildings like the University Hospital.

So guess which got the priority? Well, if you are reading this urban weekly, you know the answer.

In the meantime, the provincial government announced that to compensate for what will eventually be about $700 million being cut from our health care budget, it would offer an additional $70 million for home care services.

Home care needs

Cute. Really cute. Home care does not allow for a doctor to come to your house to reset your broken leg. In fact, the need for home care itself is so great that not one person in need of it that I know of is getting adequate care.

OK, then the government got really compassionate: it allowed that a scheduled $11 million cut in health care in Edmonton would not proceed. This government obviously cares and listens (grin).

Of all provinces in Canada, Alberta has the least confidence in our health care system, with the disapproval rate of 27 per cent. Even Saskatchewan, which had to close several small rural hospitals, enjoyed a higher approval rate of its health care system than Albertans did of ours.

There is a message here, folks. Cutting 25 per cent of our health care budget doesn't wash with the public. Albertans want their health care system left intact.

My sentiments precisely. If the provincial government is so full of itself it can turn in $1.5 billion in a single year's budgetary surplus into accumulated debt reduction—an unnecessary action, given it is already required by law to pay that debt down by $200 million for the next 24 years—it should surely be able to uphold the most appreciated of our social programs.

Alas, governments don't always do what the people want. That is, of course, until election year.

Have moustache, will frolic

Drag kings add another stitch to the cross-dressing craze

BY ANDREA NIOR AND GENE KOSOWAN

Cross-dressing isn't a novelty anymore.

Thanks to hit films like Tootsie, Mrs. Doubtfire, To Wong Foo: Thanks For Everything Julie Newmar and Priscilla, Queen of the Desert, the drag queen phenomenon has finally succeeded in desensitizing mainstream culture. If vanguard female impersonator Craig Russell were still alive today, he'd have to dig his pumps in a little harder to shock the masses.

In Edmonton, local drag outfit Guys In Disguise still packs the Rebar nightclub during the Fringe, but these days, performers have to dream up new twists to bolster a once-abominable cabaret sideshow.

However, the male-dominated attraction is about to get the footlights stomped out from under it by the very gender it's been imitating for years. Sister acts, better known as drag kings, are doing it for themselves. And they're poised to crash the party with vats of fresh blood.

Leading the gender-bending counter-attack is a group called The Greater Toronto Drag King Society. The only group of its kind in Canada, its members parade onstage in moustaches, sideburns, business suits, blue-collar garb and anything else typifying male convention.

Macho, glamor puss, gay/straight, out/closeted (or somewhere in between) characters are all given the royal treatment with characters like The Captain and Denial, Man Murray, Kneel Diamond and Vannelli-Vanilli-Minnelli. Guys in Disguise, meet Gals Uber Alles.

What started as a lark for Drag King founders Joy Lachica and Rose Perri to liven up house parties three years ago has blossomed into a schtick of marquee proportions. The society's most recent show last November packed over 500 curious fans into Toronto's Opera House. Media attention from alternative publication This Magazine and MuchMusic's puff public affairs show Fax has helped establish a growing national reputation. The group's monthly Crown and Scepter Newsletter also services an eager readership.

Lesbian line-up

The Toronto troupe's line-up of almost a dozen lesbians (Lachica and Perri claim sexual orientation is not a prerequisite to join.) is also benefiting from its newly-recognized status as a legit theatre company. That cachet, says Lachica, has raised the energy level of its shows and magnified the diversity of ideas each member brings into the group.

But most routines are more satire than consciousness-raising fodder. With a load of costumes at their disposal and '70s and '80s music blaring in the background, drag kings lip-synch and "ham it up," hoping audiences will laugh along with the troupe's mandate (no pun intended) of deconstructing gender roles and images.

"We create a facsimile of what really exists so that we—and people—can laugh at it," says Lachica.

"Ours is a journey not appropriating the values attached to the characters portrayed."

Quite the opposite, in fact. They make fun of these stereotypes and all their extremes. These drag kings are pure jocularity and some folks are still waiting for the punch line.

Like a Toronto-based talk show programmer who was concerned about the Kings' wardrobe and didn't want them to wear costumes deemed too threatening to the studio audience. Ironically, the lesbian contingent hasn't exactly taken a shine to the Drag Kings, either.

"Everyone thinks it's totally cool," says Lachica, who claims heterosexuals and gay men get a real kick out of the show.

"The only hassles we get are from gay women. They don't get the humor."

It also wasn't exactly a laughing matter in the old days. Female-to-male cross-dressing was illegal in fashion-cognizant Paris in the 19th century, but that didn't stop upper-class bohemian women artists and writers from rebelling against corsets and gowns. After stoic administrations relented, the gay Paris of the 1920s was a veritable hotbed of butch styles with emphasis on tuxedos, top hats, monocles, cigars and cigarettes.

In the rest of the world, it wasn't until the Second World War when cross-dress codes were adopted, albeit for more practical reasons. While men were slogging in the trenches, women obligingly left their aprons in the kitchen and pulled on overalls to assemble weapons and ammunition in the factories.

But credit Hollywood's spit-shined lenses for elevating pragmatism to a fashion statement. Greta Garbo donned the trousers in Queen Christina as did Marlene Dietrich in Morocco. Barbra Streisand imitated a male Jewish theology student in Yentl, while Julie Andrews doffed her Von Trapp duds in favor of a female-impersonating female lead role in Victor/Victoria.

Crotch-grabbed

Pop music stars picked up on the hint. In the '80s, then-Eurythmics singer Annie Lennox shocked television audiences when she strolled to the victory podium at the Grammy Awards with sideburns pasted to her cheeks. And Madonna crotch-grabbed her way through her 1990 "Express Yourself" video that added a role-reversal backflip to Fritz Lang's Metropolis.

With a national tour planned for this summer (and Edmonton is listed as a possible stopover), the Drag Kings don't have any militant motives to express themselves other than for the sake of sheer enjoyment. To them, the notion that physical features and societal expectations are contrived and can be manipulated at will makes for a fun and enlightening twist on the whole cross-dressing experience.

As an old English joke goes, "Balls!" exclaimed the Queen. "If I had them, I'd be King!"

Now that's a novelty! ●

In her vanity book Sex, from 1992, Madonna flirted with cross-dressing.

Dressed to kill: Women's party in New York, circa 1915

A subjective experience

The Greater Toronto Drag King Society is a creative body that seeks to effectively mobilize women with an interest in drag towards progressive socio-cultural performance and creative opportunities within the context of camp and humor in masquerade.

Through the medium of drag, be it female-to-female or female-to-male gender roles, Drag kings attempt to deconstruct gender and satirize extremes in female and male gender roles, behavior and stereotypes.

The act of engaging in drag socially and in a performance context is certainly a subjective experience expressing a broad continuum of motivations for the individual drag king.

Drag kings recognize the multiplicity of our own community and are mindful to the sensitivies intrinsic to our pluralism as women, lesbians and gay individuals of diverse cultural and ethnic-marginalized groups who identify with our cause and would benefit from our contributions. ●

Bug-eyed aliens take over the Internet

VUE Net

BY JEFF BARNUM

"I was abducted by an alien spaceship, and forced to sing John Denver tunes while having sex with Elvis."

Tabloid trash, right? Not necessarily. Aliens have invaded the Internet and are spawning little alien pregnancies all over cyberspace.

For those of you wishing to chase aliens all over the physical (and virtual) landscape, there's the National UFO Reporting Centre (<http://www.nwlink.com/~ufocntr/>), whose 24-hour hotline makes it the most popular choice for reporting UFOs.

And if you wish to see what's up in your back yard, you can check out some of the sighting reports available online.

Degree of risk

However, walking around looking for space aliens is not without a degree of risk. It is probable, upon finding the aforementioned aliens, they will capture you and make you sing John Denver tunes, and so on.

Or perhaps not. After all, to the best of my knowledge I've never been captured by aliens. Nonetheless, people who believe they have been abducted refer to themselves as "experiencers."

Sure enough, there is a web site for experiencers, Abductee's Anonymous (AA), where you can relate your experience in complete confidentiality.

AA is laid out like a magazine with editorials, news bulletins, in-depth feature articles and personal abduction experiences.

An example of some of the articles available: Molly Dwyer writes the editorial "Fear is our enemy, not the aliens." A news bulletin headline reads "Abductees' Disappearing in Real Life Situations: Hypnotherapist Reports Cases of Spontaneous, Involuntary Invisibility." And there are over 20 personal accounts in this edition alone.

Weird happenings

USENET newsgroups have been invaded as well. There are some mighty weird happenings in these newsgroups. A few of the subject headers: "Light is too slow," "UFO involvement in WWII," "UFOs with handrails" (probably for those who are a little bit older and need some help getting up the gangplank to the saucer).

My personal favorite post: "I played chess with an alien and the [expletive deleted] won!" The author went on to say, "It's all true! The bastard cheated!"

Even closer to our fair province, there is the Alberta UFO Research Association (AUFORA). AUFORA seeks out and investigates sightings in, around and near Alberta.

The AUFORA home page (<http://ume.med.ucalgary.ca/~watanabe/ufo.html>) has been up for the better part of a year.

AUFORA handles many areas in the UFO spectrum. First, it deals with sightings and the investigation of Close Encounters. It also provides a resource for pictures of aliens and UFOs from around the globe (that is, the pictures are from around the globe—I'd suspect the UFOs are from around the universe).

They also have a great repository of information, (alien FAQs, crop circles, etc.) for the UFO newbie and expert.

Finally, they have a news/journal section where you can get the latest extraterrestrial poop on UFO sightings in and around Alberta.

The editorials ("Extra Terrestrial viruses: a deadly threat to human life") are aimed at people who have a, uh, greater understanding of the unknown. The news portion, however, was fascinating.

An example: about a month ago, the Canadian Department of National Defence flew up to the N.W.T. to investigate a number of UFO sightings.

There is a comprehensive report on the subject (AUFORA's director went to N.W.T. and conducted a number of interviews) as well as a link to a N.W.T. page dedicated to the sightings (<http://www.ssimicro.com/~ufoinfo>).

AUFORA's site has a ring of authenticity to it. It isn't the rabid ravings of "experiencers" (though you try keeping your sanity after being captured by aliens).

There is a deluge of sites and ramblings on UFOs. It is a task and a half to separate the scientists from the crazies, the extraterrestrial wheat from the unidentifiable chaff. In the words of a famous, if fictional, paranormal investigator however, "The truth is out there."

Any aliens wishing to abscond with Jeff will have to bring many Oreos and decaf lattes. Applications for abductions (aliens only, please!) may be emailed to <barnum@tic.ab.ca>.

Champs skate to town

SPORTS

BY PAULA E. KIRMAN

Edmonton's 72-hour sell-out of the Figure Skating World Championships (Mar. 19-24 at the Coliseum) probably has as much to do with Tonya and Nancy as it does with public enthusiasm.

"There's nothing like controversy to get attention from reporters," laughs Don Sprague, a Worlds organizer. "When that Kerrigan incident happened, the whole world watched that mess, and as a result figure skating was on the front page of every newspaper.

"Bad as the incident was, it sure created a lot of publicity. And some publicity is better than no publicity."

Sprague is also quick to credit last year's NHL hockey strike for a renewed interest in figure skating. "The only thing on TV was figure skating, and the advertisers found out they had a big ladies' audience. So their money went into promoting figure skating. The ratings are way ahead of hockey," he claims.

Main event

For the majority of Edmontonians unable to get a hold of tickets for the main event, March will feature several connected events to be held at different locations.

These include a Kurt Browning exhibit at the Provincial Museum, a fashion show, art exhibits and the "World Village" at the Northlands Agricom.

"After we sold the tickets out so fast, with only two per cent of the Edmonton population actually going, we decided we had better do something to let Edmontonians in on what's going on."

The "World Village" will have big screen televisions with the Championships piped in, a cafe of drinks and light desserts, a restaurant featuring different Canadian foods, autograph sessions, pin trading, and a trade fair "of which we're up to about 175 booths," says Sprague.

This being the first time in six years the Worlds have been held in Canada (the last time was 1990 in Halifax), Sprague believes there is no better place than Edmonton as a venue.

"Over anywhere else, the best place is Edmonton. We have the facilities and we have the volunteers, who make it run economically. Probably a lot of it has to do with Kurt Browning, but never before have we ever sold out so fast.

"It's amazing. I don't believe they could do it anywhere else like this."

Posties licked

BY MIKE MURPHY

At present, the post offices of only seven countries in the world have web site pages.

On Feb. 14, Canada Post became the first to electronically unveil a new series of stamps on the Internet.

The series of four stamps celebrates Canadian contributions in technology in the fields of information, ocean, aerospace and biotechnology.

On Feb. 15, Canada Post representatives and the stamp designer were available to answer questions on-line in a one-hour chat session.

Marshall McLuhan said "the medium is the message." By launching this stamp series on the Internet, Canada Post hopes to further enhance the country's international reputation for contributions in technology.

You can check out the Canada Post site at <http://www.mailpost.ca>.

COMEDY

BY ADRIAN LACKEY

PreVUE

It all started when Definitely Not The Opera (a Saturday afternoon CBC-AM radio show) broadcasted one of Lorne Elliott's concerts. The audience response was bigger than any of Rex Murphy's whines on DNTO.

The reaction was so great, in fact, the concert was rebroadcast several times. Meanwhile, the suits and ties at Mother Corpse took the next logical step. If Edith Bunker's cousin Maude can have her own show, why not Elliott?

"Who knows how these things are decided?" said Elliott. "Either someone there liked what they heard, or they cut the entrails out of a spotted owl and read them."

Thus Madly Off In All Directions was born, with Elliott as host. "We took the title from a Stephen Leacock short story," said the Montreal-based rebel without a comb.

Local talent

Madly comes live to the Arden Theatre in St. Albert this Friday. As part of its mandate, the event will be showcasing local comedy talent in each city it visits. Appearing with Elliott this time will be Three Dead Trolls in a Baggie (featuring fellow bad-hair sufferer Wes Borg), Atomic Improv, Zandra Bell, the neatly-coiffed hockey poet Stephen Scriver, The Hayshakers, Boyd Banks and Brent Butt, a man who's never been teased about his name.

"It's our last show for the season," says Elliott. "We don't use a laugh track, which is a great source of pride for us. 'The death of comedy,' Groucho Marx called it."

The future looks pretty solid for Elliott and his program. The series has impressed the bigwigs at CBC ("North of 60? Too High! Cut it back to 45") enough to have them renew it for another season. The show has a home page on the internet (e-mail:<madlyoff@toronto.cbc.ca>) and until April, Madly takes over The Royal Canadian Air Farce's time slot.

TO: Lorne Elliott.

Could we please change the name to Madly Off In One Direction to save on cost? ●

DANCE

BY PAULA E. KIRMAN

PreVUE

Dance Nouveau wants to warn anyone who attends their Feb. 24 concert at the Eva O. Howard Theatre they might end up dancing in the aisles.

Their first actual concert in the contemporary jazz troupe's 10-year history, New Works and Old Favorites will feature a reprisal of their 1995 Fringe production, Love Motion #9.

"We got a very positive response from the public in August," says Cindy Kerr, Dance Nouveau's choreographer and artistic director.

"Our last two shows were completely sold out and a lot of people were asking us when we were going to do it again."

The second half of the show will feature newly-commissioned dance pieces.

Kerr says many of their dancers are advanced jazz dancers at various studios.

"A lot of these dancers need another kind of venue to dance at, other than year-end recitals or a competition, and we felt this was a worthwhile project for them to dance in a different environment."

Tickets are $10 and can be purchased from Candace at 436-4126.

In one evening you can have a dinner, dance to the music of Ron Cahute and Burya—North America's premiere Ukrainian polka band—and watch performances by the Cheremosh Ukrainian Dance Ensemble and both the CYMK and Dnipro choirs.

The event takes place Saturday, Feb. 24 at the Italian Cultural Centre (14230-133 Avenue).

Admission to the event helps support the Alberta Council for the Ukrainian Arts (ACUA).

An Edmonton-based provincial arts organization, ACUA is an umbrella organization representing dozens of associations and individual artists that fosters greater awareness of Ukrainian arts through exhibits, tours, festivals, educational programs and special projects.

Silent auction

They'll be celebrating their 10th anniversary with an "Excellence in Artistry" awards presentation and a silent auction.

One individual and two organizations will be honored. Roman Soltykewich will be recognized posthumously for his work as conductor of both the CYNK and Dnipro choirs. The Ukrainian Cheremosh Society will be recognized for bringing Ukrainian dance to audiences all over the world. The Vegreville Cultural Association, which has staged the Vegreville Pysanka Festival for 20 years, will also be paid tribute.

The banquet will be accompanied by a silent auction featuring Ukrainian visual and performance art items. These include pottery by Audrey Uzwyshyn, watercolors by Larissa Sembaliuk-Cheladyn and tickets to performances by the Ukrainian Shumka Dancers and Tryzub Ukrainian Dance Ensemble. ●

Animals risky

THEATRE ReVUE
BY CHAUNCEY FEATHERSTONE

Ian Ferguson wrote a pretty good screenplay. He directed it on a stage.

Ooooh, risky.

Naming the Animals has a monster cast of 13 fully-developed characters, nearly all of whom interact with at least a half-dozen of their counterparts.

Ferguson has studied his Robert Altman. Don't worry if you lose track of the number of storylines—the twists are well-delineated.

Ferguson employs first-generation stereotypes: the characters are only one step removed from their on-the-street archetypes. While they are identifiable as the bartender, the TV reporter, the hooker and so on, they have names and histories that conflict with the expectations of them.

Defying expectations is a cool thing in character work, a dangerous thing in presentational modes. One choice affects the other. Film demands "show," not "tell."

For instance, Annie (Davina Stewart), a sad, but less-than-admirable alchoholic, can dance Virgil (Jeff Haslam), a taciturn hard-ass, around like a puppet. The intimations that they were street kids together worked fine in stage dialogue.

But Virgil undertakes a momentous venture on Annie's behalf, one beyond ordinary loyalty. Virgil explains why to Frank (Dana Anderson). The "movie" expectation demanded a montage or something: two guys talking in a bar just didn't do it.

Defiances of that sort affect pacing as well. In slow-paced films, cuts between camera positions can maintain a scene's tension in the absence of dialogue. A stage audience member is stuck in the fourth row, third seat left of the aisle, unable to zoom in for a low-angle close-up.

Dialogue gaps

In spite of some excellent commitment, nearly every actor was responsible for unsubstantiated dialogue gaps. Damn Harold Pinter and his patented pauses.

Ferguson got a lot of help in set and lighting from Roger Shultz and Jody Longworth. With some nifty scene-change choreography, they successfully guide the eye through Ferguson's ambitious tangle of plots. They could not match the speed of a movie's hard cut, though. The seams showed.

Naming the Animals is by no means a write-off. Ian Ferguson may simply have misplaced it.

See you in the movies. •

Romanovs revisited

THEATRE PreVUE
BY CHAUNCEY FEATHERSTONE

So, yesterday, the King says to Jack and Norma Jean, "Great party las' nigh'! No-buddeh knows bar-b-que lahk them there Romanovs!"

Marion Kelch would have you believe the scene—excepting the presence of Elvis, the president and the sex goddess. She might be a little biased about the last Russian royal family, hailing as she does from Czar, Alta.

Czar (pop. 180) boasts a community hall/theatre space, built in the declining years of the boom, able to seat up to 400. The Czar Theatre Guild is risking 1200 bucks on their one night stand on the Citadel's Maclab stage, having sold out three nights running in their home town.

Kelch wrote and directed Fabergé's Fantasy for The Czar Theatre Guild. This year is the 100th anniversary of the coronation of Nicholas II. He and his family were allegedly gunned down by Russian peasantry at the height of the Bolshevik Revolution in 1917.

The press kit promises "an unusual but pleasant surrealistic ending."

Man, that would take some doing. How?

"Every Fabergé egg held a secret," says Kelch, speaking of the famous ornate creations commissioned by the Romanov family. Fabergé's Fantasy hinges on one such secret.

Family heirloom

Fabergé, Kelch fictionalizes, crafted one last egg. Before its completion, the Romanovs are forced out of Moscow. Fabergé entrusts the egg to Anatoly Davidoff, a Russian courtier. Davidoff, for obvious reasons, is unable to present the gift to the Czar. The egg becomes a sad family heirloom as Davidoff passes it onto Alexei's childhood friend, his daughter Tamara.

The first time Tamara opens the egg, she is horror-stricken and helpless as the "historically correct" story magically unfol around her.

Premise One, according to Ke ch: "Two of the Romanovs ha not been found, Alexei and on grand-duchess."

Premise Two: "The body th they have—(scientists) can tell b your bones what you were like life—was not that of a very phys cally astute person and, in fac they know the Czar was alwa exercising a lot."

A dearth of certain bodies an uncertainty about the ones th do have: ergo sum, the Romano did not die that fateful day in Sib ria.

Anastasia has her own stor Crown Prince Alexei needed on "One of the theories is th became a Soviet soldier," says Ke ch.

Tamara opens the egg a seco time, some years later, at the b hest of her granddaughter. Giv the fluidity of history and the ma ic of fantasy...

Springboards a big hit

THEATRE ReVUE
BY ARAXI ARSLANIAN

The votes are in. The die is cast. Goodnight, Irene.

Edmonton now has a new major event to add to its roster.

First seen last season at Workshop West Theatre, the Springboards New Play Festival, at 3rd Space earlier this month, was virtually unheard-of by the average theatre-goer. Most people thought it was a Nadia Comenici comeback vehicle.

You've come a long way, baby.

Attendance for many of the play readings was standing room only, and considering it was a 12-play-in-eight-day event, that's a lot of falling arches. And community support? Can we talk? A usually jaded theatre salon kicked off its shoes and had fun for a change.

Best of all was the quality of material produced. Starting with The Book Of Rose by Hayden Trenholm, the story of a desperate young girl, the church, and dynamite, the festival jumped into high gear.

The fully-staged reading featured peak performances by Kate Ryan and Michael Charrois. Besides a little cluelessness about childbirth and abortion from a woman's point of view, Trenholm made an impact.

Smoke And Mirrors by Gordon Portman was next on the Vue Must-See list. A renowned-bad-boy playwright from Edmonton shocks many... sound familiar? The entire evening was spent avoiding the words "Brad Fraser."

Still, though filled with some great observational humor about the gay experience, the piece overall was wordy and, albeit unintentionally, pretentious.

In A Party To Murder, six people with shady pasts, motives and opportunities gather in a mansion on an isolated island. Penned by Marcia Kash and Doug Hughes this phenomenally funny thriller should be coming to a theatre near you. It has more twists than a buffalo's intestines, and is sure to keep you guessing.

Although closing night is often a saddening prospect, the atmosphere at the final triple-play cabaret (three short plays in one evening) was upbeat.

Rosa's Garden and Going To The Dump by Katherine Koller were charming, touching and solidly written. This reviewer will even admit to a teary eye or two. Flies by Eileen Sproule and David Clarke had me laughing hard enough to mess up my lip-liner.

G'night, y'all

THEATRE ReVUE
BY GEORGES GIGUERE

Warning: This musical contains no vile language, '90s nudity or alternative sexuality! So why write about it? Hey, I left happy, you know?

The cast plays management and workers working, playing and fighting together. Everyone is right fo the parts they play, they are all having fun onstage, and it sounds great. Hey, any excuse for a song...

John Rusich's Sid wins over the hearts of the audience as well as that of the female lead, Babe (Judy McFerran). We learn some unlikely money-saving tips from a man with a devilish grin (Randall MacDonald).

Prez, the lecherous union leader played by Byron Simpson, provides strong support in duets with a couple of the ladies. And all the songs are held together by a storyline that, while improbable, rises above silliness into good fun. Clyde Rigsby is a hoot as Hasler, the pajama factory boss unwilling to give in to the garment workers' demands for a seven-and-a-quarter half cent raise.

The machinations of labor unrest, a couple falling in love, and '50s low finance set the stage well for the second act. The plot thickens in "Hernando's Hideaway," with its moody Latin-tinged atmosphere: Sid gets Gladys the bookkeeper (Jan Mitchell) sloshed until she gives him the key to the company ledger. In the final songs, all is resolved: the lovers kiss and make up, the workers get their raise and everyone wears pajamas.

Give yourself a break, have a laugh and watch these guys do their thing.

Declaration of Independents

BY FRAN HUMPHREYS

When the Local Heroes International Screen Festival put out the call across the nation, almost 100 filmmakers answered.

They used their calling cards of course—short films of their own creation.

But only 17 of Canada's newest and hottest filmmakers will have the opportunity to screen their wares at the Declaration of Independents component of the Local Heroes festival running from Mar. 3-9, 1996.

Often called the "heart" of Local Heroes, Declarations of Independents films provide a national, contemporary perspective on Canadian filmmaking.

Selected by jury, this year's films represent every region of the country and reflect a myriad points of view—from the mainstream to the decidedly eccentric.

Filmmakers are present at the screenings to participate in animated discussions about their films with audience members, fellow regional filmmakers and industry professionals.

Screenings and discussions are hosted by Toronto film critic Geoff Pevere and Halifax filmmaker Lulu Keating.

Jacob film a Saint-ly effort

CINEMA ReVUE
BY CHAUNCEY FEATHERSTONE

The jazzy strains of "When the Saints" begin over a dark screen, fading into a brief visual essay of New Orleans. The band, it turns out, is an informal street ensemble—and white.

Filmmaker Selwyn Jacob claims no irony, but I dunno...

Jacob's The Saint from North Battleford is one of the features to be shown in the final installment of the Film and Video Arts Society's "Projected Voices" series: Independent Afro-Canadian Cinema.

To be fair, The Saint is non-controversial; it is merely the embodiment of an idea Jacob had back in 1985. Made in thorough, Canadian documentary style, the ironies crop up on their own.

Back in '85, Jacob wanted to capture a black Canadian on film as he or she returned to an ancestral home, preferably as a success. He had his eye on several possibilities. On his way to the 1988 Banff Film Festival, he was surprised to see one of his prospects on the cover of Sports Illustrated.

At the turn of the century, the Mayes family emigrated from Oklahoma, homesteading several sections in the North Battleford, Sask. area. One Mayes got himself signed onto the NFL's New Orleans Saints. South to north to south. Close enough for Selwyn Jacob.

Rueben Mayes, a runningback, went on to have a phenomenal rookie year.

Jacob couldn't believe his own a-Mayes-ing luck.

In his interviews, those understated entertaining ironies kept popping up. Saints runningback coach, Jim Skipper (himself a black man) passingly referred to Jacob's interest in Mayes' Canadian citizenship as "static."

TV sportscaster Dan Faber thought it was great that a Canadian kid with southern roots ended up playing with a bunch of southern kids with Canadian roots. He didn't seem to realize North Battleford is on this end of the country, while Acadia (home of the Cajuns) is wa-a-ay over there. Priceless.

Then there's Mayes himself, an educated young black man with an incongruous prairie "thunk" in his speech, surrounded by a culture centuries old—and maybe no longer his. Home is his mom's garden or his dad's auto-body shop.

Winston Washington Moxam, a Winnipeg filmmaker, curates FAVA's showcase. Along with Jacob's Saint he has gathered Alphonse Adutui's Survivors, an AIDS story, Claire Preito's Black Mother, Black Daughter, a Nova Scotia perspective; and Christine Brown's Brothers in Music, about two musicians one black, one white.

Moxam includes a couple of his own: The Barbeque and From the Other Side, both different slants on Canadian race relations.

Eldorado misses mark

CINEMA ReVUE
BY RUSSELL MULVEY

Montreal in the summer. Hot days, hotter nights. Eldorado follows the lives of six twenty-something Montrealers during the run of hot summer nights.

Unfortunately, none of these six people leads particularly interesting lives. It is interesting to see Quebecois Generation X-ers are just as stupid and dull as English Generation X-ers.

On the other hand, the film does manage to rise above the bland, self-obsessed characters whose lives it is chronicling. Eldorado is an interesting work.

Most of it was shot guerilla style—that is, the filmmakers did not have permission to film in most of the places they used, and this lends a frenetic, if not desperate, style to the production. We see Montreal as a centre of activity, but not at all of it is constructive. People are constantly moving without going anywhere. It is quite a contrast to other films that generally portray Montreal as a sort of European-styled centre of contemplation.

Occasional thief

The film follows the lives of Rita, a roller-blading occasional thief who owes a lot of money to a bunch of thugs. She has been taken in by Roxan, a well-off do-gooder who spends her time and money distributing food to street people. There is also Marc and Loulou, a liquor store clerk and a waitress in a popular night club. They hate their jobs, of course.

There is Henriette, completely self-absorbed and spending time in therapy to find out why people don't like her.

And finally there is Lloyd, a deejay at some alternative radio station, whose on-air personality is poetic and anarchistic and whose real personality is conatively self-centred.

There are several hints as to why these people are the way they are, but they're all tired cliches. None of these situations is explored and we continue to see them as stupid children.

Part of the problem may have been in the way the film was put together. None of the dialogue or situations was scripted and the director, Charles Biname, relied on his actors to improvise around the story he had written. Having decided to do that, he should have found some intelligent, articulate actors (certainly a contradiciton in terms).

Eldorado is an experiment that does not quite work. It is an interesting film focusing on uninteresting people.

12 MONKEYS Bruce Willis stars as James Cole, an unwilling volunteer from the year 2035 sent back in time to gather information about a terrorist group who unleashed a virus which virtually wiped out the world's population in 1996. In the end, this is a thinly-disguised chase movie. (VV)

WHITE SQUALL It's difficult to connect with this cast of spoiled rich kids and their captain, played by Jeff Bridges. They realize the true meaning of being a crew following a freak storm. Oh, La La!

The rebels of modern dance strut their avant-garde stuff

Louise Lecavalier and Michael S

DANCE

BY ANDREA MARINOVICH

PreVUE

On the stage, Louise Lecavalier is all platinum Medusa dreads. Her compact body is hurling through space and catching men twice her size. She is a hero of mythical proportions.

On the phone, Lecavalier is a woman with whom you'd love to spend a Saturday night, talking books, having fun, exchanging ideas and sharing wisdom gleaned from an extraordinary life.

Ever so charming, she welcomes you in without guile and hooks you with a strength of character that also intimates her physical prowess.

The "2" tour

We'll get to see her perform at the Jubilee Auditorium Feb. 27, in the middle of a three-year tour that will take Edouard Lock's La La La Human Steps from Paris to Tokyo. Think of somewhere you'd like to travel and chances are it's a destination on the "2" tour.

La La La's newest piece for eight dancers is a departure for Lock. Though the movement vocabulary is similar to past shows, the concept is more sophisticat- [illegible] glean the impact of the piece from [illegible] has received include, "less raw, more achieved, more sensual."

She has been with Lock for 14 years, communicating with him in a studio filled with with sweat, not words.

Freedom to think

"We don't discuss the piece, which leaves me the freedom to think and interpret in my own voice," says Lecavalier.

Both Lecavalier and Lock were moving towards the same end with "2."

"I like this crazy, aggressive style so much—the white light energy—but I was wanting to take a chance with another way of moving. It's more careful, not full-speed all the time."

This work was initiated by Lock's father's illness and deals with aging and the passage of time. Lecavalier is presented on two screens—one as a young female and another as an old woman with the help of make-up.

The juxtaposition of the beginning and the end meets in the middle with relationships between the dancers describing the fabric of life.

"Everyone's scared of old age especially in America,' observes Lecavalier. "The elderly are invisible."

[illegible] maturity with less emphasis on [illegible] live on two harpsichords by French composer and performer Jerome Charles and Montreal musician Denis Bonenfant and is built around Baroque pieces by D'Anglebert, Forqueray and Rameau.

Composers Gavin Bryars, Kevin Shields (My Bloody Valentine), Iggy Pop and alternative/indie producer Steve Albini (Shellac) add layers of contemporary music that harmonize as well as add counterpoint.

Lock hit the Canadian dance scene in 1980 after film studies at Concordia University. In 1981 he won Canada's highest choreographic honor—the Jean A. Chalmers Award.

Kamikaze style

From Businessman in the Process of Becoming an Angel, which earned Lecavalier a New York Award (the Bessie), to Human Sex (1985), to New Demons (1987), Lock was developing a style known for its kamikaze disregard for the niceties of modern dance.

He was the bad boy of new dance, producing work that looked like it belonged on MuchMusic. Indeed, his work with David Bowie on his Sound and Vision world tour that followed in 1990 and with Frank Zappa in The Yellow Shark have secured his reputation.

as identifiable with Lock's choreography as the one airborne double-spin-catch-drop-move that was repeated until the daredevil quality became commonplace.

It is significant that the other dancers have strong ballet backgrounds and it should be interesting to see Lock's work on classically-trained bodies. But it is with Lecavalier that the interpretation of this work is identified; her presence transcends technique.

Born in Montreal, she studied ballet and modern dance in Montreal and New York, where she received Canada Council grants that allowed her extended stays. She performed with companies in New York and Montreal and in one solo performance, No, No, No I am not Mary Poppins. But, she says, "I don't need to do my own work. I am fully satisfied to express someone else's."

Each work has provided new challenges she would not have anticipated. Her foray into old age was one of discovery, but she claims she "knew about it already."

Says Lecavalier, "We are programmed to age; it's in our genes, so I knew about it already. I've met lots of old people—my grandparents included—and I'm 37, so I know about aging."

She also denies she is retiring after the tour.

One would think the physical demands of Lock's full-length piec- [illegible] some point, but Lecavalier claim[illegible] she rarely gets injured. A little tu[illegible] maybe, but strong genes prod[illegible] strong bodies. A healthy mind[illegible] doesn't hurt, either.

Work maniac

A self-proclaimed "work ma[illegible]ac," she relies on the immediac[illegible] the moment in the studio wi[illegible] physical revelation happens. [illegible] don't know in advance what [illegible] going to do. If I knew in advan[illegible] it would be like cheating."

That sense of "being here now" is what makes her performance [illegible] compelling and her interest[illegible] people so attractive. "I like to tra[illegible]el in different countries, but [illegible] like a tourist. I don't walk outsi[illegible] with a star over my head."

The satisfaction that [illegible] gives her comes from the s[illegible]curiosity that travel brings. [illegible] "You can't be the same afterwa[illegible]

So did the young Louise Lec[illegible]alier always have this same vo[illegible]cious appetite for living?

"When I was young, every[illegible] seemed difficult, nothing was [illegible] I saw the danger in everything [illegible] had to push myself."

Everyone has fear, but few [illegible] the balls to not only transce[illegible] but to flourish. Lecavalier has [illegible] balls in spades.

Wide Mouth Mason

BLUES/ROOTS PreVUE

BY MICHAEL J. ELLIOTT

When is a jar not a jar? When it's a Wide Mouth Mason (playing Blues on Whyte Feb. 22-24) with the blues

Okay, maybe the analogy is a little off, but one serious listen to its prairie blues-based music—Saskatoon style—should convince any lover of true blue sounds that its brand of homegrown expression is definitely the real thing

The talent is even more remarkable when one considers the three members of Wide Mouth Mason are barely in their 20s

At an age when many of its musical contemporaries are following the well-travelled and seductively beckoning path of alternative rock, Wide Mouth Mason is attempting to travel the less-trodden route to success

Blues grabs you by the brain with one hand and by the balls with the other and just shakes you,' says guitarist-vocalist Shawn Verrault

"You feel it every time you listen. And it's easy to connect to because everyone's felt the blues, everyone's heard the blues."

Although Verrault, bassist Earl Perriera and drummer Saf Javed use blues as the starting point for their musical meanderings, Wide Mouth Mason brings a variety of other stylings to bear, including reggae, jazz and R&B.

This willingness to step outside what many listeners consider traditional blues format, along with the relative youth of the band, appeals to a much wider audience than the predominantly over-25 blues crowd.

Improvisation

"A lot of purists who've seen us play blues bars might take a while to get into some of the stuff we do," says Verrault. "But we're more into the spirit of blues and jazz, especially where it concerns a lot of improvisation and playing exactly what you feel. The blues isn't always a 12-bar shuffle; it isn't always quiet, or even sad."

One of the first things one notices about the band, and something that holds true in all aspects of the music, is the sense of maturity the boys project.

Playing anything in a trio format is difficult enough if a group really wishes to get it right, yet Wide Mouth Mason shows no signs of hesitancy about performing its self-appointed task.

Much of this maturity the members attribute to support they've received from family, friends and other musicians, as well as the isolation of the prairies and the openness of the western music scene which has really allowed them to concentrate on their music.

Another major reason is their association with another name on the prairie music scene, Carson Cole, who has helped to guide their course for the last two years.

"Carson's had us working in a wide array of venues," offers Javed with a chuckle. "For the past couple of years we've been getting a lot of seasoning, some real experience, in places where we often don't seem to belong—you an the kind of bars you saw in Blues Brothers. There was one place where the patrons line-dancing between our set

Yet the members have pr to be fast learners. "A coupl years ago we were such gr horns," adds Perriera, "bu there's one thing Carson's tau us, it's that no matter what h pens—van breaking down, blowing up—never miss a gig show always has to go on

The Nazarene, their firs length release (they have taped demo work) is due April, and the whole record process was something quite ferent from the band's inclinati to live music.

"Well, we do tend to put gether a lot of stuff on the r anyway," states Verreault

"And we are basically band. However, our two-year re tionship with Carson has also a constant recording process of a university of recording th really taught us the differen between live and studio per ances. The recording we d fore just wasn't sounding r we weren't getting it—so we g bunch of new equipment and st ed again. We have about a doz solid originals on our album no

Original sound

Solid would certainly d their original sound. While band does open its show with covers, like tunes from Buff Springfield, Stevie Ray Vaugh and Traffic, a real sense of so writing acumen emerges in second set when the original emerge.

One of these, "Sister Sally," become a public awareness too focus attention on the issue of fa ily violence and is slated for vi production via a committee c prised of some major figure Canadian media, social se corporate sponsors and a law firm.

Yet I ...realize that I needed a ...outlet on a regular basis, ...wouldn't stifle me artisti-...ally do appreciate music ...ided I could best serve my cause by leading through example."

One of the hardest things to manage has been the singular lack of awareness and cohesion in the music business as it relates to the "business" end of things. Tamashiro believes in order to be a strong independent artist with a product that appeals to people, it is essential to understand all aspects of the life.

He has begun teaching music marketing in Calgary, helped in no small part by his experience in the promotional end of the music business.

"With the advent of modern and sophisticated methods of recording, manufacturing and marketing available today there has never been a better time to be an independent musician."
—Tim Tamashiro

"There is a real lack of information and responsible education from the music industry itself," notes Tamashiro,

"And it leads to unrealistic expectations among bands and musicians. People have the idea that the primary way to succeed is to get signed to a major label and devote themselves entirely to it, instead of starting slowly and exploring all the other options the information and multi-media age is making available.

"People have to become more responsible for themselves; they have to take an active role in their own future. I believe that if it's done correctly, it's more than possible to provide oneself with a good living."

What kind of response does Tamashiro hope to garner?

"Well, it may seem strange, but I'm looking at two extremes. The 35-and-up crowd will probably be more amenable to—and familiar with—the stuff I do, but I also want to get to the 13-to-25 audience, mainly to offer them something that has style and flair that can act as an introduction to so much other great music.

"The sheer array of music available to the average 20-year-old today is bewildering, yet—without trying to dis the music—so much of the 'alternative rock scene' sounds the same. I'm just trying to add a little color; the people with Reba McIntyre and Harry Connick Jr. are also the ones I want to reach."

Tamashiro would also like to show those "jazz purists" (who refuse to acknowledge the role of the crooner in the contemporary conception) there really is a place for Sinatra-esque entertainment. It's ironic that much of this type of music is being embraced by the younger audiences, while many older jazz listeners prefer to stay mired in the more traditional styles.

"I'd love to see the jazz festivals incorporate this style of music into their programs more," says Tamashiro, "bringing them in as 'entry level' events—and marketing them as such—in order to truly broaden the base of support. However, I've just started the process of approaching the festivals, so I'll have to wait and see what happens. My main focus is still on producing the best independent music I can."

As an addition to the theory that history repeats itself, the Rat Pack, which epitomized much the same sentiments during its foray into showbiz in the '60s—and from whom Tamashiro admits he draws much of his inspiration—must be glancing down approvingly.

...ndfathers of industrial music's ... is a major ...intment

Ministry is a band that has developed an identity crisis. Recorded in the ruins of a haunted whorehouse in the band's adopted hometown of Austin, Tex., Filth Pig is a lesson in chaos.

So much so that long-time drummer William Rieflin quit the band halfway through the recording session. Paul Barker and Al Jourgenson, the nucleus of the band, salvaged what they could by returning to the familiar confines of Chicago Trax to do the final mix.

But they couldn't save the record. The album has no direction. Every song, save for the retro-industrial synth piece, "Lava," sounds unfinished. Jourgenson and Barker come up with the riffs and then milk them to death.

The band doesn't sound sure if it wants to continue on its progression from electronics to speed metal, or if it would rather revisit its Twitch-era past.

There are blistering guitar solos mixed with '80s Eurodisco beats. It's a mess.

Ministry aren't sure if they want to be the baddest cowboys on the range or remain the band of choice for unrepentant goths. It features White Zombie-ish 21st century guitar work and cheesy homages to black-leather bands like Siouxsie and the Banshees and the Sisters of Mercy.

There is also a pointlessly lame cover of Bob Dylan's "Lay Lady Lay."

"The Fall," "Dead Guy" and "Reload" are one-riff wonders. Five minutes of the stuff makes you realize Ministry is getting what it can out of a limited number of musical inspirations.

Considering that the last Revolting Cocks record also went down as a disappointment, one has to wonder if Barker and Jourgenson have gone from a pair of musical visionaries to a pair of guys who are just plain over the hill.

AASHNA
Aashna
(MCA)

Aashna is Israeli/Minni Mouse-styled rap and dance music, with a big brass section and Middle Eastern tongue-twisters in "Family."

A Toronto-based chanteuse, Aashna is not just a sneeze, she's done some creative reworkings of disco bleating with clever lyrics.

Her producer, Rick Dodson, throws in doo-see-doo rhythms, along with male chorus's "eeya"-ing. In ballads, Aasha has a sweet girl delivery, similar to a Janet Jackson and prejaded Madonna.

TORI AMOS
Boys for Pele
(WEA)

Amos's third major-label effort sees a major departure for the alternative world's piano crooner of choice.

Amos has fallen in love with the harpsichord, which offers a Baroque-ish change of pace to her music.

As well, she's become a bit of a man-hater, as evidenced by the shot of a pig suckling her breast on the inside jacket.

But the attitude change is a good thing. Amos is as delicate as ever with the keys, but her music has a new edge—a new passion—of which it never had a hint before.

The lead single, "Caught a Lite Sneeze," is a wonderful piece of the pop music craft; "Professional Widow" features Amos at her bitter best.

"Slag pit/slag shit/honey bring it close to my lips/yes/don't blow those brains yet/we gotta be big boy/we gotta be big/starfucker just like my Daddy/just like my Daddy selling his baby," she moans.

But Amos doesn't stop there. Her new-found feminism also attacks religious mores.

"Muhammad my friend/It's time to tell the world/we all know it was a girl back in Bethlehem/and on that day/when she was crucified/she wore Shiseido Red and we drank tea/by her side," she sings in "Muhammad My Friend."

This album will no doubt be viewed by all Amos fans as a radical departure. But this isn't a case of an artist looking for a new schtick. Indeed, it's a case of Amos finally finding her voice

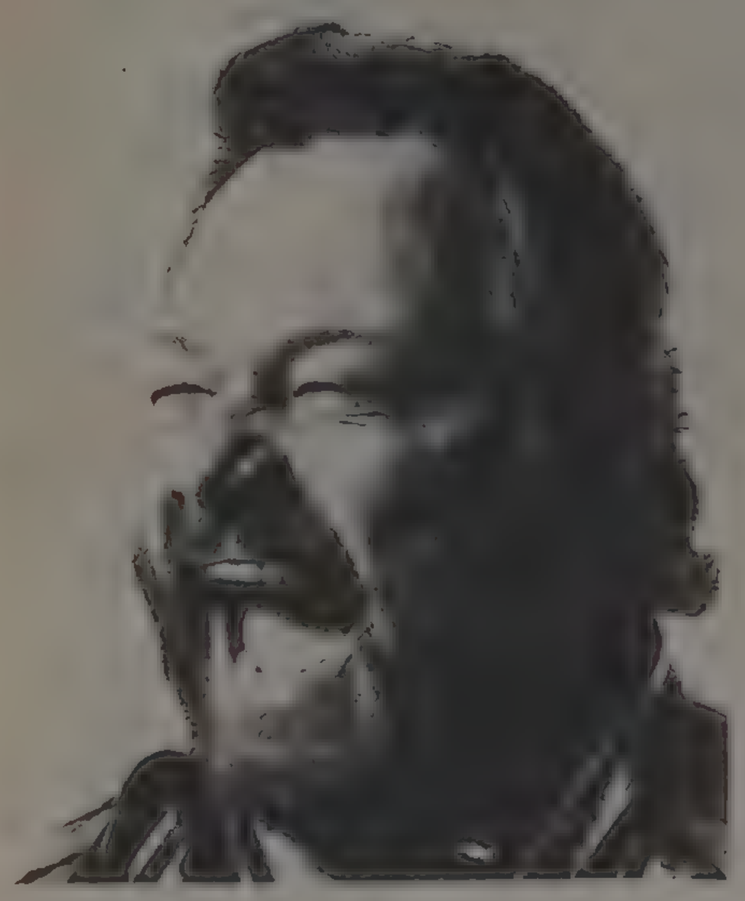
Room 224, S.U.B., University of Alberta,
Edmonton, T6G 2J7. (403) 492-4643

Social mores be damned. Sound off with CJSR's alternative rock programming Monday to Thursday from 3 to 5 p.m. On who else but FM88.



MONDAY: "Yardapes on Parade" with Eddie Lunchpail.
Tune in as Mr. Lunchpail wreaks havoc and emotional distress upon the wee minds of the masses.

TUESDAY: "If it's Tuesday, I must be tongue-tied!"
Alternative rock with the lovely and talented Christine. Like your music crunchy? Then this is it! The crispiest, crunchiest little radio show to traverse the airwaves. Stays crunchy—even in milk.

WEDNESDAY: "Much Mucous" with Sensitive Biff.
Say goodbye to embarrassing ear wax with Dr. Biff's aural expectorant.

THURSDAY: "Smilin' Jay's 20th century Charles Dickens Experience."
Are you experienced? If you haven't heard Smilin' Jay's show you're probably not as experienced as you think you are.

Women Seeking Men

I'm a single mom, 33 yrs. old. I've two young boys. We're a very happy. There's nothing wrong, but I'm just looking for a bit extra for myself. I'm looking to give a bit extra to a grown-up man for a change. I'd like to meet Mr. Right, of course. I want a fellow who's funny, extremely intelligent, sharp, confident, happy, a little competitive, a non-smoker, challenging & very physical. Your body should show that you care about yourself. You're handsome, under 36, over 5'10" tall & open to experiencing my children's activities down the road, too. Maybe you'd share a popcicle with us later. I like music, movies, dinners, theatre, walking, skiing, golfing, monopoly & don't like smoky bars. I like generally being busy. If you want to hear more, call Box 1152.

I'm 22 yrs. old, 5'9" tall, 170 lbs. with short blonde hair & green eyes. I'm professionally employed, not attached, have no dependents & I'm a non-smoker. I like going out on a Saturday night with a group of people because I'm a social butterfly. I love sports (hockey & football mostly). I read books by Ray Bradury, Stephen King & more. My musical tastes are quite varied, mostly alternative but no country. I like camping & rollerblading in the summer & ice skating in the winter even though I'm not that great at it. I'm looking for someone who's over 5'10" tall, around my age & has the same interests as me. Hopefully, someone with a gorgeous smile as well. I want to start dating someone but if there's no spark, friends are great too. Box 6662.

I'm single, never married, 34 yrs. old, 5'10" tall, attractive, with a slim to medium build, shoulder length brown hair & blue-green eyes. I've no dependents. I'm a social drinker & recently quit smoking & would prefer dating non-smokers. I'd like to meet a single man, with no dependents, 30 to 37, over 5'10" tall, who, like me, is easygoing, attractive & employed. I'm very down-to-earth, open & honest & have a good sense of humour & a positive attitude. These are also qualities I'm looking for in a person. I'm definitely a blue jeans kind of girl looking for casual dates which might lead to a long term committed relationship with the right person. I like a wide variety of different music, watching movies both in & out, comedy clubs, occasional nights out dining & dancing. There are lots of other things I like to do as well. If interested, call Box 10151.

My name is Michelle. I'm an interesting woman, 39 yrs. old, 5'4" tall, 125 lbs., with short, reddish brown hair & green eyes. I'm hoping to meet an honest, sincere, nice looking man 39-45 yrs. old. I enjoy being outdoors. I love camping. I enjoy reading, writing, sports & animals. Hopefully, you do too. I like both quiet times & party times. If you're willing to meet a woman who is attractive, well-humoured & intelligent, please call Box 8481.

I'm a full time student, 18 yrs. old, 5'8" tall, with short dark hair & blue green eyes. I'm very athletic & quite muscular. I play soccer, rugby & enjoy reading, cooking & having lots of fun. I'd like to meet men, 18 to 24, who'd maybe like to get together & go to a movie, have a quiet dinner or go to the bar. I enjoy dancing, walks, hikes, spending quality time with that special someone. Most of all, I hope you've a good sense of humour. Box 5387.

I'm 36 yrs. old. I've never been married & have no dependents. I'm active & enjoy skiing, skating, working out at the gym, cycling, tennis, hiking & willing to try most things. I'm a non-smoker & social drinker. I'm independent & hoping to meet someone with similar traits & interests. With a life that's presently busy & full, I'm looking for a nurturing, long term relationship starting as friends to discover the possibilities. For more information, call Box 2528.

I'm 26 yrs. old, 6' tall with brown hair & green eyes. I have a medium build. I have a part-time job. I find myself to be a very outgoing person who likes the outdoors, swimming, biking, camping, fishing, nice long walks, romantic dinners, dancing, pool, darts, movies, music & sports. I'm also very open-minded, honest, caring, understanding & faithful with a great sense of humour & great personality. I'm also not into head games. I'm on the system to meet new people, start out as friends & casually date. If you're interested, please box me. Box 9412.

I'm professionally employed, 30 yrs. old, 5'8" tall with strawberry blonde hair, big blue eyes, fantastic smile & a great personality. I'm a single mother of two children. My little boy is 4 yrs. old & my little girl is 6. I like camping, hiking, biking, triking, skiing, skating, hunting & fishing. I'm looking for casual dating & some friends. Hopefully, in the long term, I would like to have a relationship. If this sounds interesting, don't be shy & get back to me. Box 5680.

This beautiful pussy cat has long brunette hair, hazel eyes & is 5'5" tall. I'm a little inhibited but also very open-minded. I have a shy & gentle personality but I can also be wild & crazy. I would like to meet a man who believes in for better or worse, is not afraid of commitment & has no hang ups. He should also be attractive, adventurous, kind, courteous, spontaneous, considerate, gentle, mature, muscular, affectionate & honest. He should also look great in blue jeans & know how to cook. Box 3761.

I'm a single, white female, 32 yrs. old, 5'7" tall, 140 lbs., with short brunette hair & hazel eyes. My interests include country & western music, dining out, candlelight dinners, sports, reading, movies & dancing. I'm a sincere & warm person, a non-smoker & social drinker. I've a good sense of humour. I'm seeking a white male, 32 to 40, average weight, with a good sense of humour, a non-smoker & social drinker, employed & shares the same interests as mine. I'm looking for a friendship that will hopefully lead into a long term relationship. Call Box 10482.

I'm 23 yrs. old, considered very mature for my age, 5'8" tall, 130 lbs., with brown hair & green eyes. I can have an intelligent conversation & am not a boring person. I'm very outgoing & have a good sense of humour. I'm not on the system for phone sex, intimate encounters, etc. I'd like to meet somebody, become friends first & see where it goes from there. I don't like head games. I know where I want to go in life & what I want to do. I don't want to jump into anything, get married or anything like that. I'd like to meet people who're honest & sincere about who they are & what they do. I'm considered very attractive & am not conceited. If interested, call Box 3431.

I'm an attractive person, in my late 40's, 5'6" tall, 145 lbs., with natural blonde hair, with streaks & a little bit of gray & blue eyes. I take pride in my appearance. I keep myself in shape & expect the fellow I'm with to do the same. I've a sense of humour, high morals & good friends. I'd like to meet a man around my age, who's tall, attractive, with a kind, gentle nature, good morals & be able to communicate. I'm not into phone sex & not into attached or married fellows. I'm a smoker, but would like to quit. I walk twenty-four blocks every day to work. In the summer I play slow pitch. If interested, call Box 5642.

My name is Nancy. I'm single, 46 yrs. old, 5' tall, fluffy exterior but I'm working on smoothing it down. I'm a non-smoker & social drinker with no socially unacceptable bad habits that I know of. I have short reddish brown hair, turquoise eyes, four dependents but no children. My dependents are a bird, two cats & a St. Bernard that I show. I have a hot tub on my deck, my own vehicle & a full-time job. I'm looking for a friend who's single, age appropriate, no dependent children, honest, drug free, non-smoker with a full-time job. If you would like to chat, box me & we'll take it one step at a time. Box 8306.

I'm 28 yrs. old, 5'9" tall, 135 lbs., with dirty blonde hair & blue eyes. I'm looking for the type of person who's spontaneous, outgoing, intellectual, witty, charming, smart, who's not afraid to let his hair down or get his hair blown out of place. He doesn't care if it's raining or snowing or the wind's blowing. He can enjoy the small, little things in life that make life very special & unique. I've been to college & have gone through all different kinds of careers. I can enjoy anybody who can put a little spice into life. If interested in getting to know me & have some fun, call Box 11617.

My name is Eleanor. I'm 27 yrs. old, 5'8" tall with blonde hair & green eyes. I'm a small town girl with a great smile. I'm looking for a man who's willing to explore each day as it comes. I'm looking for that 25-35 yr. old, extinct male who likes the country way, horseback riding, the two step, camping in the great outdoors, having fun & has a great sense of humour. I'm really tired of the bar scene. If I sound like the woman for you, give me a call. Box 8551.

I'm 5'5" tall, 120 lbs. with strawberry blonde hair & hazel eyes. I enjoy a variety of activities, a lot of outdoor sports, horseback riding, dancing, quiet evenings at home & fun evenings with friends. I'm a non-smoker & social drinker who likes to have a good time with or without other people. Call Box 5177.

I'm 30 yrs. old, 5'2" tall, a little overweight, but dedicatedly working on it. I have long ash blonde hair & hazel green eyes. I'm considered very attractive. I'm a smoker & very light social drinker. I'm a Christian & have strong morals & beliefs on life. I enjoy many things such as camping, fishing, horseback riding, reading, dancing, music & also spending quiet times at home or with friends, stimulating conversation & a lot more. I'm seeking a man with similar interests who's emotionally & financially secure. If you're looking for a one-on-one relationship & believe in trust, honesty & respect in a relationship, call Box 8550.

I'm a Sagittarius, 21 yrs. old, 5'2" tall, 110 lbs., with long brown hair & crystal blue eyes. I'm very attractive, outgoing, spontaneous, very sincere & honest. If you'd like to know more, call Box 8860.

I'm a 25 yr. old, single mother of two. We also have a couple of cats & a dog. I'm 5'6" tall, medium built with hazel/green eyes & long hair just past my waist. I love the outdoors, country music, most sports, camping, fishing & staying at home. I'm not into the bar scene. I'm a very mild drinker & a reluctant smoker. (I'm working on it.) I'm looking for a man who's very sincere & honest & hopefully, we can work on a friendship first. I do prefer bigger, taller kind of huskier men. If you're interested, get back to me. Box 6649.

Men Seeking Women

I'm an accomplished musician, new to Edmonton, originally from California. I'm a sensitive, new age rocker with an associate degree in jazz & contemporary music. I'm very outgoing & love to laugh. I'm secure in myself & my beliefs, but have an open mind & a zest for life. I prefer contents to packaging, but both are important to this 22 looking 27 yr. old. I'm 5'8" tall, 150 lbs., with a medium build, well toned & proportioned, with long, curly blond hair & sky blue eyes. I'm all natural, no preservatives, phosphate free, environment friendly & 100 per cent real. I don't enjoy the company of plastic people. I prefer verbal & emotional intimacy prior to physical intimacy. However, I've a raging libido. I'm considered an excellent lover. If curious & would like to find out more, call Box 1063.

I'm 30 yrs. old, 6' tall, 190 lbs., usually clean-shaven, with long light brown hair & blue green eyes. I've never been married & have no children, but three cats. I'm emotionally & financially secure & open-minded. If you're interested in skiing, pool, small outings with friends, animals, children, campfires, camping, movies, watching the stars, trips to the mountains, etc., call me. If you're single, 18 to 28, like the way you look in jeans & short t-shirt or bathing suit, are intelligent, witty, emotionally secure, believe in fate & destiny & have outgrown the head game stage, call Box 9165.

I'm looking for an attractive woman probably over 29 yrs. old who's emotionally healthy & open to a long term relationship, values people & spirituality. A woman of energy & wisdom, insight & celebration with a heart of pure gold. I'm 6'2" tall, handsome & fit, intelligent, articulate & well-read. Emotionally healthy, I value people & believe in a spiritual power of Infinite love. I enjoy dancing all night long, honest communication & ethnic foods. Chocolate, coffee & chili sauce are my favourite flavours. I am who I am & I am but waiting for you to call. Box 1874.

I'm a tall, educated, white male. I'm a non-smoker & very light social drinker. My passions are photography & anything to do with nature & the outdoors. In my spare time I enjoy documentary tv shows or science programmes. I also like listening to the CBC or watching old movies. I enjoy dining out occasionally & am a very down-to-earth guy, jeans & t-shirt type. I'm easy to talk to & fun to be with. If you call I know you won't be disappointed. Box 4188.

I'm 34 yrs. old, 6'2" tall, 230 lbs. with long brown hair & eyes that change colour with the light. I'm attractive, intelligent, articulate & a good lover. I'm looking for someone who's attractive, intelligent, compassionate, romantic & likes to have a lot of fun. Someone who believes that communication is the key to any relationship. I'm looking for someone who's willing to put some effort into pleasing their partner. If you're interested, give me a call. Box 6740.

I'm 6' tall, 180 lbs., with short brown hair & blue eyes. I've a bit of a goatee going only two weeks into the growth of it. I'm just looking for somebody who could be my soulmate & a romantic interest in my life. I'd like someone to cuddle up with, watching tv or go for long walks, sit around by candlelight, whisper thoughts & desires into each other's ear. I want someone I can care about & love at the same time. If interested, call Box 3719.

I'm a self-employed, 24 yr. old. I'm 6'4" tall, 240 lbs., in good physical shape with dirty blonde hair, green eyes & I'm good looking. Some of my interests & hobbies are mountain biking, swimming, weight lifting, pool & watching movies. I'm looking for a good looking, slim woman 18-30 yrs. old who's very easygoing, open-minded & just likes to go out & have fun. If you're interested, box me. Box 1836.

I'm a single, white male, 25 yrs. old, 5'11" tall, 180 lbs., with brown hair & brown eyes. I enjoy doing a wide variety of activities like going out for coffee, to a movie or getting away for the weekend to go skiing, etc. I've been described as having a mischievous side, boyish humour & cute. I'm looking for someone who can be as flexible as myself, also honest, secure & caring. If you'd like to get to know me better, call Box 7791.

I'm 6'2" tall, 215 lbs. with blue eyes, brown hair & a moustache. I've a big heart & a nice smile. I love life & all that it has to offer. The woman I seek will be very special to me. All I ask is that she be willing & able to put up with me. I'm sorry, I'm not perfect but it's not for lack of trying. I don't smoke. I look forward to talking to you. Box 5814.

I'm an attractive, single, white male, 29 yrs. old, 6' tall, 185 lbs., with short brown hair & blue gray eyes. I'm employed full time & love my job. I enjoy watching & playing most sports. I try to stay fit by playing hockey, rollerblading, golfing & jogging. I love dining out or cooking dinner for someone special. I enjoy going to movies, live music venues, sporting events, concerts & quiet times at home. If you're a single female, 19 to 30, slim, attractive, realistic, not materialistic & share some of my interests, call Box 7477.

My name is Ed. I'm 5'6" tall with blue eyes & curly hair. I'm in the professional sales field. Some of my interests are sports, darts, camping & things like that. I'm a smoker & a casual drinker. Other than that, I really don't know what to say. I'm kind of new to the system. If you're interested, get back to me. Box 9440.

My name is Russell. I'm 26 yrs. old, 5'7" tall, 140 lbs. I'm Chinese. I grew up here so I don't speak the language. I'm pretty busy at work. In my spare time, I like to read about different things. Anything from Stephen King to how the phone system works. I love movies & I enjoy playing pool every now & then but I'm not into bars at all. I work out about three times a week. I'm emotionally stable (at least as far as I can tell) & I don't drink or smoke. I'm not looking for any one-night stands. Other than that, I don't realty know what I'm looking for. Anything from meeting interesting people to maybe, finding a kindred spirit. Someone who's intelligent, disciplined & leads a full life. If I've sparked your interest in some way, leave me a message & we'll work things out from there. Box 9424.

I'm 34 yrs. old, 5'5" tall with reddish blond hair & a moustache. I'm looking for a woman who likes going out to do things or outdoor sports or camping & sometimes sitting at home by the fireplace watching a good movie. I also like dining & dancing on the weekends. I'm pretty outgoing, open & honest. I'm hoping to find someone who's the same. I'm looking forward to starting as friends & taking it from there if things work out great. If you're interested, give me a call. Box 4167.

I'm professionally employed, 29 yrs. old, 6'1" tall, 180 lbs., with brown hair & blue eyes. I'm Catholic, educated, non-smoking & seeking a very special woman as a friend, companion & lover. I'm well groomed & have been told I'm handsome. I've a very dynamic sense of humour & love to make people laugh. I'm seeking the same in an intelligent, articulate, Christian female, 22 to 29, who's professionally employed or a university student. You have no dependents, are a non-smoker, attractive, honest, open & understanding & why communication is so important in a relationship. If interested & would like to hear more, call Box 3588.

The Short Vue

BY ROY FISHER

PARTY OF BLOSSOMS

No Blossoms know they've hit it big when they're either 14-across in a crossword puzzle, wrestled to the floor by federal leaders, or when their work is used as incidental music on a television series.

To pick a totally random example (out of the air, about a month ago, Jan. 24, to be precise) fans of the CBC/Columbia series Party of Five got a brief glimpse of the Edmonton music scene. In that episode was a video of a song called "Not Sleeping" by Edmonton pop (their words) band, No-Blossoms. The single is available on their Charm CD. Hey, this might up with They Might Be Giants appearance on Tiny Toon Adventures.

By the way, Andrea Hiob, who wrote our lifestyle feature on drag queens in this issue, drums for No-Blossoms.

THE ENCHANTMENT

Among the billions and billions of galaxies, each with billions and billions of star systems, worlds do exist where the arts are fully valued. Andrew Lloyd Webber is a good composer, and everybody spends their time buck naked. Alas, this world is none of those, but on Mar. 11, for the first time, Edmonton Musical Theatre will be having a fundraiser.

Edmonton Musical Theatre is a non-profit arts training organization with a 19-year history. The fundraiser, titled Some Enchanted Evening, will feature a silent auction, dinner and a show by Edmonton Musical Theatre and some of their alumni. The razor-less Colin Maclean will be the master of ceremonies.

Tickets are $50 per person (with a $25 tax receipt), and are available either at the Mayfield Ticket Office or by calling 486-7827. The evening begins at 6 p.m. at Mayfield Dinner Theatre, 16615-109 Ave.

MUSIC FROM THE CHORAL REEF

Choral music isn't dead yet. The Vancouver Chamber Choir, an internationally-acclaimed vocal ensemble under the direction of Jon Washburn, has commissioned over 90 brand-new, unsung choral works in its 20-plus year history. The choir plays the Horizon Stage in Spruce Grove Feb. 29.

The performance, titled "Bel Canto—The Art of Song," mixes Celtic, Cuban and Canadian folk songs amidst traditional Brahms and Schubert selections. Tickets are available at the Horizon Stage Box Office (King St. Mall, Spruce Grove, 962-8995) or via Ticketmaster.

ODE ON A UKRAINIAN SAMOVAR

Break out the kobosa and boil the borscht: it's just about time for the annual Taras Shevchenko Concert, Mar. 10 at Victoria High School Theatre (101 Street and Kingsway Avenue).

This year's guest artists are Winnipeg singer Alexis Kochan and premier bandura player Julian Kyasty. Advance tickets are available at the Ukrainian Book Store (10215-97 St., 422-4255).

The Taras Shevchenko concert is presented by the Ukrainian Music Society of Alberta and the Ukrainian Canadian Congress. For more information, call Irene at 457-5136.

Oh, yes: a samovar is a kind of eastern European urn, just in case it comes up in Trivial Pursuit.

HAM ON VIOLINS

The Edmonton Symphony Orchestra takes a trip down Broadway Mar. 2. Or, rather, Broadway takes a trip to the ESO, with the arrival of multi-talented composer Marvin Hamlisch.

Hamlisch's composing credits include the '60s hit "Sunshine, Lollipops and Rainbows" and over 40 motion picture scores. Among his classical compositions are "Anatomy of Peace," commemorating the 50th anniversary of D-Day, and "One Song," which premiered at Carnegie Hall four years ago.

Tickets range from $22 to $42, and are available at the ESO Box Office (428-1414) or through Ticketmaster (451-800). Tickets that include a post-concert reception are $125.

RETURN OF THE CAT

A while back, the National Film Board library closed down its service due to budget cuts, leaving behind a despairing clique of NFB aficionados, clamoring after such classic animal-loving films as The Cat Came Back. Since January, however, the NFB has added over 2,500 videos to the Edmonton Public Library's video collection, available to anyone with a library membership. New productions will be added to the collection as they are released.

A complete listing of all NFB videos, including those not available at the library, can be found at the NFB internet web site at <http://www.nfb.ca>.
